Deceased Estates

Introduction

This findaid provides access to the estate files of deceased persons. Estate files are being used in daily practice in archives, mainly as a source for genealogical information, but they are also an important source for social history that goes beyond looking into individual persons or families.

Previous editions of this finding aid were limited to the records groups (fonds) EST (Estate Files from the Master of the High Court) and NLA (Nachlassakten, a compilation of estate files previously contained in German colonial court records). These are almost exclusively about persons previously classified as “White” or “European” under German and South African colonial rule.

Following the doctoral research by Ellen Ndeshi Namhila about the “missing Native Estates”,¹ the National Archives of Namibia has started a process of recording and indexing those estate records of persons previously classified under racist categories such as “Native”, Bantu”, “Black”, “Coloured”, etc. Despite obvious neglect and partial destruction, Namhila’s research has shown over 11,000 such files to exist. The work-intensive indexing process for these records is far from being finalised, with less than one tenth of the “Native” estates having been recorded so far, but this update gives a first glimpse of the ongoing work, and has also been a first and not yet definitive test of the options to assemble and present such a large volume of data in a text file. It already became obvious that MS-Word is reaching its limits in effectively handling such large amounts of tabulated data, and future editions will have to be presented in several volumes.

Apart from the added “Native” estates, the present list also incorporates for the first time scattered “White” estates in other fonds such as SWAA and various magistrate courts.

The list provides access to 11,315 files with 19,463 names. The number of names is larger than the number of files because the index includes the names of surviving spouses, birth names, aliases, and sometimes the names of parents mentioned in “Native” estates.

It should be noted that in this edition, the nobility prefix “von” in German names has been omitted for technical reasons, and because in Germany it is not considered part of the surname in alphabetical sorting. For example, in the present list, the Baron Hans Heinrich von Wolff is listed as Wolff, Hans Heinrich von and not as Von Wolff, Hans Heinrich. The compiler is looking at options to introduce both versions in future editions, as “von” and similar German prefixes have often been regarded as integral part of the surname in Namibia, following the South African tradition.

South African surnames with prefixes, such as Van der Merwe or Du Plessis, have however been listed in the form that is commonly used in South Africa and Namibia.
