Private Accession A.0915 Keetmanshoop Museum

Introduction

The Keetmanshoop Museum is a municipal museum, accommodated in the historical former Rhenish Mission church in the centre of town.

In 2008, the museum's curator at the time, Antoinette Mostert, transferred a number of items to the National Archives. The items had been deaccessioned in Keetmanshoop as duplicates or because they were not relevant to the local history.

Although the items in this ensemble do not share an organic relationship, it was decided at the time to keep them together as a single accession.

Individual items of this accession have been catalogued on the databases ACCPT, PHOTO, MAP, and NAMLIT to facilitate retrieval.

While most of the accession is stored in the Accessions main series in a single box, some items have been shelved separately in the Large Format Accessions series (A.0915 L) and the Photo Accessions (PO/A.0915).
